B. Northwest Regional Water Reclamation Facility (Northwest Plant): Long-Term Hazard Mitigation Alternatives and Potential Funding Opportunities

In addition to the oversight of flood damage recovery efforts now underway at the Northwest facility, staff from the engineering firm of WK Dickson and Company, Inc. were also tasked with evaluating methods that could minimize damage and reduce the time necessary to restart plant operations after a future flooding event. Mr. Holland will provide an overview of various mitigation alternatives and recommendations outlined in a recent Technical Memorandum on this subject, and Ms. Mettlen will discuss funding sources that may be available to offset part or all of the cost of these mitigation improvements.

WK Dickson has been strategically working with the potential funding agencies as a part of the NWRWRF disaster recovery efforts. On Tuesday, March 19th ONWASA staff received new information concerning a grant application window. The Golden Leaf Foundation received initial Hurricane Florence funding from the NC General Assembly to assist with immediate repair projects. Golden Leaf staff also understand that many entities are still working through the FEMA process and that some of the repair projects have mitigation components that are integral to the repair itself. One part of the mitigation activity necessary at the Northwest Plant unquestionably fits this criteria. Specifically, it is the mitigation (elevation) of the electrical control building to prevent future flooding of this critical plant component.

Golden Leaf staff have been in conversation with ONWASA’s consultants, W.K. Dickson, and agree that the electrical building fits the purpose of these initial funds and now recommend submission of the grant funding application by ONWASA as soon as possible. WK Dickson believes that raising the electrical building is the best mitigation alternative for the electrical building and is necessary regardless of what other mitigation activities may take place at the plant after review by regulatory authorities. Further, they recommend moving on the funding application as quickly as possible. It is possible that quick action may secure over $1 million in funding needed for the electrical building portion of the NWRWRF repairs/mitigation.

For these reasons, it is recommended that the Board grant approval to move forward with the Golden Leaf funding application for the NWRWRF electrical building repairs/mitigation.

Realizing the need to update the policy to ensure compatibility with changing state and federal law, as well as a changing workplace environment, ONWASA’s Human Resources (HR) staff initiated a complete personnel policy review in 2018. The HR Department then staffed the draft policy through the organization’s leadership team and the Authority Attorney, Mr. Chuck Kitchen. All staff and attorney changes were considered and incorporated, as appropriate, prior to submitting the current draft policy to the Board of Directors. Several Director comments have been received and have also been incorporated into the draft policy before the Board at this regular meeting.
